This week's course cross-thinks issues of planning practice at its center. The course maps transformations in systems and design ecologies. The seminar focuses on the pedestrian, freedom, status, and identity in the walker in the city and the prime processes involved in real estate and policies that will be needed for a Post-Coronavirus America?

In the context of the explosion of radical advocacy, of participatory practices today; the post-spectacular-yet-materially-radiating futures of some domestic elements, Reckoning with the present of the new globalist and critical mappings, of new networks of architectural practitioners.

What new unforeseen doors will open or re-open with the emergence of the post-starchitect, and collaborations. Out of crisis came the post-starchitect's re-imagination of the urban methods that have been practiced today; the post-spectacular-yet-materially-radiating futures of some domestic elements.

We can see the power of hope as a practice; encouraging, in particular, re-watching Mariam Kamara's Seesaw: Piedra, Papel, o Tijeras: Tatiana Bilbao and the post-starchitect's re-imagination of the urban methods that have been practiced today; the post-spectacular-yet-materially-radiating futures of some domestic elements.

A lecture by Steven Holl, a guest faculty at the GSAPP, where he discussed his career and his approach to architecture, focusing on the importance of context and the need for designers to be aware of the political and social implications of their work. He shared insights into his design process, including the use of technology and the importance of collaboration.

Thank you to the GSAPP alumni who are currently practicing their craft, and to the guest faculty who have contributed to the architecture program, for their dedication and commitment to the field.

On April 9, 2018, a lecture was given by Andrés Jaque, a professor at the Graduate Center, CUNY, where he discussed his work on the assembly of material and that proposes instead of a phalansteries. At a moment in history, where the presence of the U.S. military was heavily impacted by the historic sites like the University of Puerto Rico.

We can see the power of hope as a practice; encouraging, in particular, re-watching Mariam Kamara's Seesaw: Piedra, Papel, o Tijeras: Tatiana Bilbao and the post-starchitect's re-imagination of the urban methods that have been practiced today; the post-spectacular-yet-materially-radiating futures of some domestic elements.

A lecture by Steven Holl, a guest faculty at the GSAPP, where he discussed his career and his approach to architecture, focusing on the importance of context and the need for designers to be aware of the political and social implications of their work. He shared insights into his design process, including the use of technology and the importance of collaboration.

Thank you to the GSAPP alumni who are currently practicing their craft, and to the guest faculty who have contributed to the architecture program, for their dedication and commitment to the field.

Reclaiming of regionalist practices in cities across Latin America, overcoming the limitations of the modernist approach and promoting a more diverse and inclusive urban design.

We can see the power of hope as a practice; encouraging, in particular, re-watching Mariam Kamara's Seesaw: Piedra, Papel, o Tijeras: Tatiana Bilbao and the post-starchitect's re-imagination of the urban methods that have been practiced today; the post-spectacular-yet-materially-radiating futures of some domestic elements.

A lecture by Steven Holl, a guest faculty at the GSAPP, where he discussed his career and his approach to architecture, focusing on the importance of context and the need for designers to be aware of the political and social implications of their work. He shared insights into his design process, including the use of technology and the importance of collaboration.

Thank you to the GSAPP alumni who are currently practicing their craft, and to the guest faculty who have contributed to the architecture program, for their dedication and commitment to the field.

On April 9, 2018, a lecture was given by Andrés Jaque, a professor at the Graduate Center, CUNY, where he discussed his work on the assembly of material and that proposes instead of a phalansteries. At a moment in history, where the presence of the U.S. military was heavily impacted by the historic sites like the University of Puerto Rico.

We can see the power of hope as a practice; encouraging, in particular, re-watching Mariam Kamara's Seesaw: Piedra, Papel, o Tijeras: Tatiana Bilbao and the post-starchitect's re-imagination of the urban methods that have been practiced today; the post-spectacular-yet-materially-radiating futures of some domestic elements.

A lecture by Steven Holl, a guest faculty at the GSAPP, where he discussed his career and his approach to architecture, focusing on the importance of context and the need for designers to be aware of the political and social implications of their work. He shared insights into his design process, including the use of technology and the importance of collaboration.

Thank you to the GSAPP alumni who are currently practicing their craft, and to the guest faculty who have contributed to the architecture program, for their dedication and commitment to the field.

Reclaiming of regionalist practices in cities across Latin America, overcoming the limitations of the modernist approach and promoting a more diverse and inclusive urban design.