Emmanuel Admassu's "The Mead," a sculpture garden exhibit, will be on display at the 2023 AIA conference in Washington, D.C. The sculpture will be part of a series of installations by the late artist Haile Maryam and will be sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution.

Emmanuel Admassu is an internationally acclaimed artist known for his modernist sculptures that explore themes of identity, culture, and history. His works have been exhibited at major museums around the world, including the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

The exhibit will feature several of Admassu's most recent works, including "The Mead," which is inspired by the ancient Egyptian goddess Maat, who represents truth, justice, and order.

Visit the AIA conference website for more information on the exhibit and how to attend.

More Info