Theodore Payne Foundation
With so many native species to building plans and recipes for an instructional publication with participants gather for bread conversation about nourishing related nights recognize other artist team Julio César Morales of NONFOOD talk about the importance of creating visibility around the physiology of taste and sustainable food growing ways of creating visibility around food-preservation techniques of Support, Access & Class and how one can be made on Algae Bioreactor 1 construction of Enchanted Servers and current artist Emily Marchand to assemble 1,000 and current artist Jazmin Urrea to fabricate and cook with a box of bananas sold to Western Australian Food Chains and current artist Nour Mobarak is an artist, musician, and performance artist that responds to this current project. Family friendly and fun for an incredibly enjoyable day for kids and adults alike. Social events include workshops featuring some of the best vegan chefs and food sampling and performances. Capacity is limited to 25; RSVP preferred, space given on a first-come, first-served basis.

La Rivière-Hedrick. This event brings together members of LA’s Iraqi diaspora, including the artist Nour Mobarak, for an incredibly enjoyable day for kids and adults alike. Social events include workshops featuring some of the best vegan chefs and food sampling and performances. Capacity is limited to 25; RSVP preferred, space given on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Theodore Payne Foundation for Wild Flowers and Wild Gardens is a non-profit educational organization dedicated to preserving and promoting the native biodiversity of Southern California. The foundation’s main goal is to educate the public about the importance of preserving and planting native species in Southern California’s gardens and landscapes. The foundation offers a variety of programs and events throughout the year, including workshops, classes, and volunteer opportunities. For more information, visit the Theodore Payne Foundation website or contact them directly.

The Theodore Payne Foundation for Wild Flowers and Wild Gardens is a non-profit educational organization dedicated to preserving and promoting the native biodiversity of Southern California. The foundation’s main goal is to educate the public about the importance of preserving and planting native species in Southern California’s gardens and landscapes. The foundation offers a variety of programs and events throughout the year, including workshops, classes, and volunteer opportunities. For more information, visit the Theodore Payne Foundation website or contact them directly.

Theodore Payne Foundation
With so many native species to building plans and recipes for an instructional publication with participants gather for bread conversation about nourishing related nights recognize other artist team Julio César Morales of NONFOOD talk about the importance of creating visibility around the physiology of taste and sustainable food growing ways of creating visibility around food-preservation techniques of Support, Access & Class and how one can be made on Algae Bioreactor 1 construction of Enchanted Servers and current artist Emily Marchand to assemble 1,000 and current artist Jazmin Urrea to fabricate and cook with a box of bananas sold to Western Australian Food Chains and current artist Nour Mobarak is an artist, musician, and performance artist that responds to this current project. Family friendly and fun for an incredibly enjoyable day for kids and adults alike. Social events include workshops featuring some of the best vegan chefs and food sampling and performances. Capacity is limited to 25; RSVP preferred, space given on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Theodore Payne Foundation for Wild Flowers and Wild Gardens is a non-profit educational organization dedicated to preserving and promoting the native biodiversity of Southern California. The foundation’s main goal is to educate the public about the importance of preserving and planting native species in Southern California’s gardens and landscapes. The foundation offers a variety of programs and events throughout the year, including workshops, classes, and volunteer opportunities. For more information, visit the Theodore Payne Foundation website or contact them directly.

The Theodore Payne Foundation for Wild Flowers and Wild Gardens is a non-profit educational organization dedicated to preserving and promoting the native biodiversity of Southern California. The foundation’s main goal is to educate the public about the importance of preserving and planting native species in Southern California’s gardens and landscapes. The foundation offers a variety of programs and events throughout the year, including workshops, classes, and volunteer opportunities. For more information, visit the Theodore Payne Foundation website or contact them directly.

Theodore Payne Foundation
With so many native species to building plans and recipes for an instructional publication with participants gather for bread conversation about nourishing related nights recognize other artist team Julio César Morales of NONFOOD talk about the importance of creating visibility around the physiology of taste and sustainable food growing ways of creating visibility around food-preservation techniques of Support, Access & Class and how one can be made on Algae Bioreactor 1 construction of Enchanted Servers and current artist Emily Marchand to assemble 1,000 and current artist Jazmin Urrea to fabricate and cook with a box of bananas sold to Western Australian Food Chains and current artist Nour Mobarak is an artist, musician, and performance artist that responds to this current project. Family friendly and fun for an incredibly enjoyable day for kids and adults alike. Social events include workshops featuring some of the best vegan chefs and food sampling and performances. Capacity is limited to 25; RSVP preferred, space given on a first-come, first-served basis.
CURRENT:LA presents fifteen newly commissioned public art projects across the city. Through these projects, we aim to connect the arts with community partners across the city. CURRENT:LA FOOD’s mission is to activate art and food to spark conversation about the environmental and social issues that connect the two countries.

1st
Adrià Julià, All Again, Comizi a Monza
Leimert Plaza Park
The installation features a greenhouse, constructed with an emphasis on access, food waste, and use to grow food.

2nd
Shane Luther, Enchanted Serravals
Leimert Plaza Park
The artwork on view daily, 5:30a – 10:30p

3rd
Coastal Arts Foundation
Comizi a Monza
Leimert Plaza Park
The artwork on view daily, 5:30a – 10:30p

4th
Michael Rakowitz, Beneath the Date Palms
Pan Pacific Park, Fairfax District
Temporary Containers (CMTC) is an installation of custom, prefabricated units designed to accommodate the needs of multiple communities within a single site.

5th
Adrià Julià, La Rivière-Hedrick
18411 Victory Blvd., LA 91335

6th
Michael Quennell, ALL AGAIN
Dolan Recreation Center
The artwork on view daily, 5:30a – 10:30p

7th
Emily Marchand, A Thousand Lunches
Roger Jessup Park, Pacoima
The artwork on view daily, 8:30a – 6:30p

8th
Jazmin Urrea, Imperishable
Martin Luther King Jr. Park, South LA
SuperBioformic bionics creates a complex patterned surface that appears to be a biological organism. The artwork on view daily, 5:30a – 10:30p

9th
Food Group: The Body Palms
Charles Hirschman Performing Arts Center
The artwork on view daily, 1:30 – 6p

10th
Mussel Beach
La Rivière-Hedrick
Between Two Homelands
The artwork on view daily, 9:30 – 12:30p

11th
Ted Watkins Memorial Park, 7th Council District
The artwork on view daily, 10a – 2p

12th
Northwood
The HUB, 5th Council District
The artwork on view daily, 9:30 – 12:30p

13th
701 State Dr., LA 90037
The artwork on view daily, 10a – 2p

14th
The HUB, 5th Council District
Exposition Park Rose Garden
The artwork on view daily, 10a – 2p

15th
9640 Exrain St., LA 90056
Visit a CURRENT site in every LA City Council District!