SUSAN MACDONALD

April 15, 6:30pm

Virtual Lecture

Concrete heritage: beleaguered, besieged, beloved, conserved

Susan Macdonald joined the Getty Conservation Institute in 2008 as Head of Buildings and Sites, where she oversees over 20 projects that aim to advance conservation practice internationally involving research, field projects, training, and dissemination.

This talk addresses both the legacy and future use of concrete. Where does conservation fit in the debate on the future of concrete?

Organized as part of the Preservation Lecture Series.
