FAIRGOERS EMBRACE CROSSOVER-COLLECTING AT FOURTH EDITION OF TEFAF NEW YORK FALL

(New York, NY) – November 3, 2019: TEFAF New York Fall 2019 opened on Friday, November 1, at the Park Avenue Armory, following a well-attended preview day on Thursday, October 31. With museum-quality works accompanying collaborative booth spaces showcasing the aesthetic interplay between historic and modern and contemporary art, the Fair saw robust sales during the preview, with reserves and conversations continuing as the Fair progresses. Strong institutional interest and buying prevailed throughout, with some of the world's most eminent museums represented in the first couple of days.

Sales of paintings began within hours of opening. Robilant + Voena (Booth 201) sold a portrait of Hungarian composer Franz Liszt (1838) by Austrian painter Friedrich von Amerling (1803–1887), and first-time exhibitor Nicolás Cortés Gallery (Booth 303), sold Lady lying in a divan by Raimundo de Madrazo y Garreta (1841–1920). Robert Simon's (Booth 327) The Virgin and Child with the Infant Saint John the Baptist and Saint Elizabeth, a drawing by Italian painter Giorgio Vasari (1511–1574) sold to a private collector for an undisclosed amount.

American dealer Taylor | Graham (Booth 321) sold oil painting Nacht (Amstelburg in Amsterdam) (1908), by leading Dutch Modernist Leo Gestel (1881–1941). Another returning exhibitor, Gallery 19C (Booth 370), sold two pieces in the early hours of the Fair: Gustave Courbet's (1819–1877) Low Tide in Normandy for an asking price of $175,000, and The Rosary (c. 1900) by Dutch painter Nicholas Wilhelm Jungmann (1872–1935) for an asking price of $50,000.

Galerie Kevorkian (Booth 323) sold works across their specialties on the opening day, including a pair of openwork finials with griffin heads (c. 7th–6th century BC), an Iznik border tile with tulips and lotus flowers (c. 1580) and Iskandar with his mother Nahid and bride Roshanak (c. 16th century AD), an illustrated folio from a manuscript of the Shahanna.

Contemporary gallery Sean Kelly (Booth 210), who partnered with ancient arts dealer Charles Ede (Booth 210), sold two editions of Kehinde Wiley's (b. 1977) much-admired painted bronze sculpture Rumors of War (2019) and Sol LeWitt's (1928–2007) ink on paper piece, Red Grid, Yellow Circles, Black Arcs From Four Sides and Blue Arcs from Four Corners (1972). This pair is among seven new collaborative booths at TEFAF New York Fall, which offer a fresh approach to collecting to fairgoers who are used to contemporary art fairs.

Sales of Asian art included Sebastian Izzard (Booth 369), which sold a range of prints on the opening night, priced from $50,000 – $200,000, and Gregg Baker Asian Art (Booth 353)'s a pair of six-fold paper screens painted in ink and colour with sakura (cherry trees) and kiku (chrysanthemums) on a gold ground (c. 16th–17th century).

Tambaran (Booth 371), an exhibitor embracing cross-collecting within its everyday practice, sold a stunning Sung Hee Cho (b. 1949) three dimensional painting, titled Garden (2019) for an undisclosed price. Tambaran, one of New York City's most respected Tribal Art galleries, has hung several of Shun Hee Cho's works to complement its tribal sculpture.

Stephen Ongpin (Booth 355) sold Henri Matisse's (1869–1954), A Standing Female Nude (1950), charcoal and pencil drawing heightened with white and grey gouache, that showcases how this artist continued to experiment throughout his career.

TEFAF New York Fall is accompanied by a dynamic roster of programs, including TEFAF New York's "Coffee Talks" and "TEFAF Afternoons" series, panel discussions, receptions, and more. On Opening Day, November 1, Claire Barry, Director of the Kimbell Art Museum; Michael Gallagher, Chairman, Paintings Conservation, The Metropolitan Museum of Art; Robert van Langh, Head, Department of Conservation and Science, Rijksmuseum, came together with Moderator, Jim Coddington, former Chief Conservator, Museum of Modern Art, to discuss, Thoughts from the Scaffold: Conserving Works in Public.

Later in the day, a packed audience turned out for Chinese Art and Its Markets: A Tremulous Present, What for the Future? where an eminent panel of art and economic experts took stock of the current critical state of relations between mainland China and Hong Kong and discussed the implications for the future.

On Saturday morning, November 2nd, a lively panel of experts convened on the topic of Giovanni Francesco Barbieri (1591-1666), known as Guercino, to discuss the continued perennial appeal of his work, Still Passionate for Guercino, against the backdrop of the current exhibition, Guercino: Virtuoso Draftsman, at the Morgan Library and Museum.
