Columbia University Tech Talks is a new lecture series hosted by Julia Watson, Prefabrication in the Public Realm.

Dr. Irit Katz is a lecturer in the field of nature-based design. Watson recently published 'Design by Radical Indigenism,' and her recent essay 'How Responding to the Loss of George Floyd Can Repair a Broken Healing, Truth-Telling, and Harm: Architecture, where he directs the Sustainable Communities at the University of Virginia.

This seminar addresses systemic racism in real estate, with a focus on the field of architecture and how it intersects with social justice. Watson recently published 'Design by Radical Indigenism,' which explores the concept of indigenism in design.

The Tamer Fund for Social Ventures provides seed grants to nonprofit organizations that are working to address social problems. Experts in the field will discuss the impact of architecture on society and its role in addressing social issues.

Richard Plunz, a professor of law and culture at the University of Cambridge, will be speaking on the topics of property, real estate transactions, housing, and urban planning. He will deliver the lecture "Deconstructing the Common Camp," which explores the history of architecture and its role in shaping society.

Cecilia Puga, a professor of law and culture at the University of Cambridge, will be speaking on the topics of property, real estate transactions, housing, and urban planning. She will deliver the lecture "Deconstructing the Common Camp," which explores the history of architecture and its role in shaping society.

Shelby Green, a professor of law and culture at the University of Cambridge, will be speaking on the topics of property, real estate transactions, housing, and urban planning. She will deliver the lecture "Deconstructing the Common Camp," which explores the history of architecture and its role in shaping society.

On March 16, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 17, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 18, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 19, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 20, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 21, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 22, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.

On March 23, 2021, the Urban Infrastructure & Politics Series will be held at the Tulane School of Architecture on Feb. 1 at 1:15 pm. The topics will include real estate development and its impact on society.