MEMORIES OF UNDERDEVELOPMENT: ART AND THE DECOLONIAL TURN IN LATIN AMERICA, 1960-1985

GALLERY 2
22.MAR.-09.SEP.2018

From March 22 to September 9, 2018, Museo Jumex will present the exhibition Memories of Underdevelopment: Art and the Decolonial Turn in Latin America, 1960-1985, organized by Julieta González, Artistic Director from Museo Jumex. The exhibition examines a major paradigm shift in culture and the visual arts, characterized by the articulation of a counter-narrative to the rhetoric of developmentalism that resulted in early instances of decolonial thought in the artistic practices produced in the region between the early 1960s and the mid-1980s.

The exhibition is set within a particular historical moment that takes as a starting point the height of the modern project in Latin America and its unraveling in the following decades. During this period the problem of underdevelopment was at the forefront of social, economic, and political concerns throughout Latin America, most notably through the contributions of dependency theory, which basically posited underdevelopment as part and parcel of the modern capitalist world-system that, far from being eradicated, would only be perpetuated and maintained by the implementation of developmentalist models. In the arena of culture, intellectuals and artists throughout the region manifested a profound investment in negotiating the complexities of modernity and its conflictive relation to underdevelopment.

Echoing the critiques and concerns coming from the field of political economy, they questioned imposed cultural and aesthetic models, marking a critical distance from the canon and formal vocabulary of the modern, reclaiming local forms of knowledge as well as popular and vernacular expressions.

Many artists, some even formerly affiliated to the modernist avant-gardes in their respective countries, established a dialogic relation to these cultural forms, engaging in a structural commitment to their incorporation into their own avant-garde practices and generating forms of collectivization of experience that fostered social awareness through spatial modes of perception and participation, in a way that this decolonial turn can be seen as a major paradigm shift after that of experimentation with geometric abstraction characteristic of modern movements in Latin America.

Memories of Underdevelopment gathers approximately 400 objects from more than 50 artists working in eight countries throughout Latin America. The exhibition presents works from: 3 Nós 3, Benjamin Abrahão, Lola Álvarez Bravo, Joaquim Pedro de Andrade, Luis Arias Vera, Artur Barrio, Jacques Bedel, Fernando “Coco” Bedoya, Lina Bo Bardi, Paulo Bruscky, Athos Bulcão, Teresa Burga, Ivan Cardoso, Antonio Caro, Manuel Casanueva, Elda Cerrato, Víctor Hugo Codocedo, Centro de

The exhibition was presented for the first time at the Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego (MCASD), from September 2017 to February 2018, as part of the initiative of the Getty Foundation, Pacific Standard Time: LA / LA, an extensive exploration of the Latin American art in dialogue with Los Angeles. After this presentation at Museo Jumex, Memories of Underdevelopment will be presented to the Museo de Arte de Lima (MALI) in Peru in the fall of 2018.

LECTURE

MODERNITY AND CAPITALISM: A DECOLONIAL GAZE

Puerto Rican sociologist Ramón Grosfoguel will discuss the intricate relationship between modernity and capitalism sitting at the core of contemporary debates. A member of the group Modernity/Coloniality, Grosfoguel has written extensively on the decolonization of knowledge and power, topics that are dealt with from an artistic point of view in the exhibition Memories of Underdevelopment.

Ramón Grosfoguel (Puerto Rico, 1956) is a professor at the Department of Ethnic Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. He writes on decoloniality, political economy of the world-system and international migrations.

In the context of Memories of Underdevelopment: Art and the Decolonial Turn in Latin America, 1960–1985, the museum has conceived a series of corollary events to the exhibition including a cycle of projections of the films included in the shows as well as others related to the Brazilian Cinema Novo, Third Cinema, and the genre of the “pornomiseria” of Cali, Colombia. Also, in mid-May the museum will organize a series of conferences with sociologists, historians of art and artists, who will examine the specifics of this decolonial and its implications for contemporary artistic practices in Latin America. Among the lecturers are: Irene Small (assistant professor of contemporary art and critic, Princeton University), Mariana Botey (associate professor of history modern and contemporary art of Latin American art, department of visual arts, University of California, San Diego, UCSD), Edgardo Lander (sociologist, professor of the Central University of Venezuela, Caracas), Andrea Giunta (director of the Center for Latin American Visual Studies, University of Texas, Austin and director of the Center of Experimental Art of the University of San Martín, Buenos Aires), as well as artists Fernando Bedoya, Carolina Caycedo, Fernando Palma Rodriguez and Elvira Espejo.

Memories of Underdevelopment: Art and the Decolonial Turn in Latin America, 1960–1985 is co-organized by the Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego and Museo Jumex, and Museo de Arte de Lima. Lead support was provided through grants from the Getty Foundation. Additional support was provided through a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.
