Social Entrepreneurship and the Urban Built Environment

Spring Semester 2018

Tuesday 3-5pm (600 Avery -- aka Ware Lounge)

Instructors: Thaddeus Pawlowski (t.pawlowski@columbia.edu), Kairos Shen (kairos.shen@gmail.com)

From the outset, within the limits of the power allowed them by law, local governments in capitalist states across the globe have been deeply enmeshed in planning and developing the urban built and social environment. As builders, lessors, regulators, and sources of capital, they have directly developed land for government facilities and infrastructure, and they have subsidized and regulated firms in the private economy whose activities bear on the use and allocation of space. But during the second half of the 20th century and accelerating to the present, the financial, institutional, legal, political and conceptual boundaries between public and private have become less distinct, with public and private roles in urban development and governance overlapping. Developers and public authorities alike think of their work as social (i.e. mission-driven) and entrepreneurial. Meanwhile, companies like Uber, Air BnB and Etsy have disrupted established economic and socio-spatial patterns, influencing the choices that people have and make in the realms of housing, work, consumption and travel. Finally, entities in the so-called “third sector” – civic organizations, cooperatives, and non-profits – have proliferated, assuming a large role in shaping urban built and social worlds. In this context, the definition of a public benefit is often contested, as is the question of who should be responsible to define and defend the public interest in city-making.

This course relies on a series of cases to illustrate and explore the ways in which cities – and planning – have changed with the acceleration of entrepreneurial activity across sectors in recent decades. Students will be exposed to both academic thinking on important questions of ownership and public responsibility and best practices in planning and policy designed to confront these challenges.

Office hours by appointment

Course website:

Format: The first 75 minutes of each class period will generally be a seminar-style lecture (i.e. the instructor will present material while soliciting/providing opportunity for input, discussion, and questions). The remaining 45 minutes will typically be student-led, based on field work done outside of class.

Expectations:

1) active participation (15%)

2) 3-4 page short paper due by e-mail on Monday January 30th (15%)

3) one in-class case presentation based on independent research( 35%)
4) final project due April 27 (35%).

Grading: HP (high pass) = a superior level of work. P (pass) = an acceptable level of work. LP (low pass) = work that meets minimal standards. F (fail) = work that is unsatisfactory. UW (unofficial withdrawal) = assigned to students who miss more than three required classes or whose names appear on the grade sheet but have discontinued attendance. INC (incomplete) = may only be used if a student has approval from the Admissions Office for proven illness. CP (credit pending) = may only be used if a student has approval from the Admissions Office for extenuating circumstances.

Foundational questions about entrepreneurship and governance underlying this entire course:

- What is the goal? What has to get done?
- What is the entrepreneurial institution or strategy being used to get that thing done?
- How is the institution organized? How is it chartered or incorporated?
- What is the institution’s relationship to the capital markets? To members of the public?
- What is the impact of the chosen governance structure on outcomes? (who benefits?)
Week by week reading assignments (available on Canvas site unless otherwise indicated)

January 23 - Examining entrepreneurial governance structures

Required Reading:

David Harvey, From Managerialism to Entrepreneurialism: Transformation in Urban Governance in Late Capitalism. (The Roots of Geographical Change: 1973 to the Present (1989), pp. 3-17)

Background Reading:

January 31 - Public sector governance of megaprojects

We are going to review two case studies in class, based on the questions that were answered for this week's assignment. Please come prepared to talk about these projects, based some of the reading below and other independent research.
