

The Spring 2022 semester introduces an exciting line-up of events that build on the School's ongoing exploration into issues such as climate change, social equity, as well as the impact of data and technology on the built environment through new forms of practices and collaboration across scales, modes of engagement, and geographies.

The programming is free and open to the public.

- In-person events will be open to Columbia University affiliates and live-streamed for the general public on the GSAPP YouTube Channel.
- Virtual events are held on zoom, please register in advance for webinar links.

Program details and additional events can be found on the School's online calendar.
