

FEBRUARY 22 – 26

In honor of Black History Month, Columbia GSAPP is highlighting the achievements and contributions of Black alumni throughout February.

Jeh Vincent Johnson (1931-2021) was born in Nashville, Tennessee and graduated from Columbia College in 1953 as president of the student body. He returned to Columbia to earn his M.Arch in 1958 and was awarded the William Kinne Fellows Prize upon graduation. The prize enabled Johnson to travel across Europe for several months alongside his wife, Norma Edelin.

After working for the acclaimed architect Paul R. Williams, Johnson settled in the Hudson Valley, where he co-founded a private practice with William Gindele '57 M.Arch (1925-2020). He began teaching at Vassar College in 1961 and served as a beloved and influential faculty member for 37 years. In 1971, Johnson and several colleagues at the AIA national convention in Detroit formed the National Organization of Minority Architects (NOMA) to both ensure that minority architects were known to the American public and to encourage young Black and Latino students to enter the profession.

KINNE WEEK

GSAPP's Virtual Kinne Week, which starts today, introduces a framework that allows the School to continue and expand on its important tradition of encouraging encounters with people and places that are fundamental to our learning process while remaining temporarily geographically fixed.

Programs directors have compiled a list of recommendations on GSAPP's internal site including virtual visits, international professional conferences, and resources that provide opportunities to connect with a vast network of global thinkers and practitioners across the disciplines and learn more about new initiatives by the architects, planners, preservationists, designers, and developers who are shaping their cities to become more equitable and sustainable.
