In honor of Black History Month, Columbia GSAPP is hosting a week-long series of events and programming to celebrate the contributions of Black architects and designers. This initiative is part of the broader effort to recognize and honor the significant impact of Black leaders in the field of architecture.

Agency in Architecture

A panel of notable Black architects and designers will take place on [date]. The discussion will focus on the agency of architects and the role they play in shaping the built environment. Speakers include [list of speakers].

Pandemic Domesticity

A talk by David Hartt on [date] will explore the concept of domesticity in the context of the pandemic. Hartt will discuss how the pandemic has altered our living spaces and the implications for future architectural design.

Teaching Action and Justice

A panel discussion with historians and educators [list of panelists] will take place on [date]. The conversation will address the importance of teaching Black history and the role of educators in fostering a more inclusive learning environment.

Designing+

A series of talks and workshops [list of events] are scheduled to take place throughout the week. These events will cover a range of topics, including sustainable design, social justice, and community-driven projects.

Virtual Kinne Week

As part of the week, GSAPP is launching Virtual Kinne Week, which starts today. This initiative is dedicated to the memory of Jeh Vincent Johnson (1931-2021) and includes a series of events honoring his legacy.

Organized by the Architecture and Urban Design Program

The events are organized by the Architecture and Urban Design Program at Columbia GSAPP. For more information, please visit the GSAPP website or contact [contact information].